To Encourage Jobless Men to Work on Farms

A provincial government financial aid scheme to encourage single unemployed men in Alberta to take farm jobs for the winter months, was announced by Dr. W. W. Cross, provincial relief administrator. The plan will take place of that supported by the federal government last year.

A single man taking such a farm job will receive $7.50 worth of clothing from the province and 15 cash for the first month. For his second month's work he will receive $7; third month, $8; fourth month $10, and $10 each month thereafter until March 31. The only cost to the farmer in return for the man's work is room and board.

Court Gives $3,000 To Mrs. Hall, Milo

Damages to the extent of $3,000 and costs were awarded by Hon. Mr. Justice Frank Ford to Mrs. Jane Hall of Milo, against Owen V. Hickman of Vauxton in Supreme Court. Friday afternoon, in respect of injuries received in an automobile collision on April 11 south of Blackie.

Defendant had paid into court $2,500 but His Lordship awarded the higher sum with costs.

U. Campbell McLaughlin, K.C., acted for the plaintiff and W. H. McLaws for the defendant. About a month prior to the collision Mrs. Hall had undergone an operation and as a result of the accident the ailment for which she had undergone an operation had recurred, it was claimed.

AGENT 1-1 ARROWWOOD

THE hunting season is here. In Canada the wins of early frost in the air and the maples, like banners of crimson and gold against the dark friendly evergreen, proclaim that once again the red gods hold high carnival.

The woods are at their best—the moose is sleek and black, the buck deer has his horns bunched to his fancy, the coat of the black bear shines like silk and the lusty robe of the grizzly is a study in dark and grey. The big-horn sheep is restless and alert, the mountain goat snow white and the caribou in the prime. The grouse and woodcock are plump and conspicuous in the covers, while the ducks and geese are gathering in favourite feeding grounds in preparation for their long flight south.

The game areas of Canada, scattered from ocean to ocean, are readily accessible from any part of the continent. It is not a country for the wealthy sportsman only; the hunter with moderate means may also be suited. Local residents can enjoy it at a very reasonable cost. Sportsmen from other lands are welcome and are only asked to show their appreciation of the privilege of access to her game fields by obeying the hunting laws and observing the ethics of sportsmanship. A publication entitled "Canada's Game Fields" which should be of interest to sportsmen planning a hunting trip in Canada may now be had upon application to the National Parks of Canada, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Brethren Church Notes

The Bible School is off to a good start. More have enrolled already than the total attendance of last year. The class at noon for high school students seems to be very popular, judging by the number in attendance. No fees are charged for any of the courses. Everybody is welcome to attend.

The pastor intends to speak at both services next Lord's day. We expect some extra numbers for the evening service at 7:30.

In Memoriam

THOMPSON—In loving memory of Bobby Thompson, died Nov. 5th, 1935.

No one knows how much we miss you.
No one knows the bitter pain.
We have suffered since we lost you.

Life has never been the same.
In our hearts your memory lingers.

Sweetly tender, fond and true,
There is not a day, dear Bobby
That we do not think of you.
Ever remembered by his Father, Mother, Sister and Brother.

A sextette of our young hockey enthusiasts braved the snow-drifted roads last Saturday by motor to Calgary to see the New York Rangers play the Northwestern All Stars at Calgary's new artificial ice rink. The boys were somewhat disappointed when the display was somewhat below their anticipation.

Nice Tourist Trade From United States

United States tourists turn to Canada for holiday. Nearly 90,000 passed through Carway and Couits during the months of May, June and July this year. Nearly 8,000 cars were handled at Carway during July and about 1,400 at Couits. Each year we find this business on the increase and it's up to the Government of this country, if we desire to retain this cash business with the assistance of our citizens, make it as possible to make their visit here a pleasant one. Parks, roads and every manner of travel will have to be kept in the best possible shape so that this trade along with our own will be retained year after year.

Tourist camps in the smaller centres would find a profitable business from the tourists if such camps were well located and could offer a reasonable measure of service. Towns that cannot cater to the tourist trade today should make every effort to lay the foundation for a well equipped camp for the 1936 season.

Loan Companies Steering Clear Alberta Building

Debt Adjustment Legislation Seen as Hindrance to Housing Act

Edmonton.—Eastern lending institutions are fighting shy of Alberta when it comes to advancing money for new construction, according to B. P. Alley, assistant general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. "The federal Housing Act," said Mr. Alley, "under which the Dominion treasury will advance 20 per cent of the cost of building new dwellings, will be of no practical benefit to this province as long as debt adjustment legislation prevails here."

"Eastern mortgage and insurance companies have had assets of $100 millions severely depreciated by debt adjustment acts in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba," he declared. "For this reason new capital cannot be coaxed into the Dominion housing scheme in any of the prairie provinces. This is the contention of the president of one of Canada's largest financial institutions, a company which in former years has made western loans freely."

Mr. Alley said the Dominion housing scheme is not in practical operation in Alberta.

"But that indicates no discrimination against Alberta," he added.

"It is not an example in being made of this province, because the latter elected a Social Credit government. The fact is that mortgage and insurance companies are making virtually no loans in any province in which the Debt Adjustment Act operates."

"The blow dealt by the western Debt Adjustment Acts, under which debtors and mortgagees are given preferred and special treatment, has been an enormous capital under law," Mr. Alley explained.

"We had a $100 millions in mortgages severely injured by provincial legislation. As a result, new capital is not at all anxious to lodge in any private province. Capital under laws of this type, feels it hasn't a fair chance," he declared.

There has been a feeling in Alberta that eastern lending institutions are using debt adjustment legislation as a blind, refusing to make loans under the Dominion Housing Act and at the same time making private loans at higher interest rates. Mr. Alley said this impression was false.

SYNOPSIS

Nancy Nelson is a sub-deb, a gay, irresponsible girl of nineteen, with no care beyond the choice of her costume for her constant partying. Her father, in the market crash, by her indulgent father loses all he had, and his family is faced with the necessity of a simpler method of living. At this juncture a letter is received from an eccentric relative in Colorado, who offers the girl a home on what seems to be impossible conditions.

After much consideration Cousin Columbine's offer is accepted, and Nancy and Jack arrive at Pine Ridge. Nancy set out one afternoon to climb to the top of a hill so as to obtain a view of the surrounding landscape and miss the path Aurora would take her to follow. A truck comes along the road, driven by Matt, and she asks him which way to go. They ascend the hill, back around, and then go to Cousin Columbine's. There Mark Adair, who is Nancy's uncle, tells her that Jack Nelson has been hired to help out while Luke's leg gets better. With Jack away, Nancy finds that she is alone, and having no books to read, the idea of starting a public library at Pine Ridge seems a good one, and Nancy writes home to get her parents to send all the books they have, and all they could induce others to let them have.

Nancy's parents and friends gave their liberal support to her request for her books, and a sizable box arrived in due course. Father Adair painted a sign for the library, and the Adams worked on the shelves for the books and decorations to make the room look presentable. Jack Nelson, Matthew Adair, and Nancy go to the prime home of Matt, and after the ride, and after Nancy and Jack leave for home, they are caught in a blizzard. Blinded by the swirling snow they collide with a school of children, which was stalled across the road with its back wheels resting in a snow-filled gully. Their car being wrecked, Jack and Nancy stay with the children and do their best to help. The next morning Jack sets out for help in the blizzard. He succeeds in finding help, and the party of children and Nancy are rescued. As a result of the rescue, Nancy's feet are badly frozen and Jack is seriously ill with pneumonia, but both of them recover.

Now Go On With The Story

"The same, lady—or one branch of it anyway, and after last night's rain the brooks and rivers will be full. You'll lose your mind over the road ahead, Nancy."

Mark was right. They followed a mountain stream bordered by giant firs and quaking aspens. The mountains were greener, and "more friendly," observed Nancy. "More like New England." And after a camp-fire lunch, with the historic old-time rattling peasantry at the feet, Cousin Columbine told some of the old tales which never failed to stir her audience.

"When we get home," Jack prophesied, watching his sister's rapid countenance with some amusement, "Nancy will bore her friends with all the stories of pioneer days in Colorado, and storm the library for literature on the subject."

Father Adair looked up with a smile.

"In that case, I've a little book for a young Englishman which I'll present to you, Nancy. It's worth reading."

"You mean the fellow who landed at Vera Cruz, came up through Colorado and camped for a time at South Park—Bayou Salade, they called it then?" asked Matthew.

His father nodded, and went on: "I wish I could recall something of one of our western poets wrote about him. It says:

"Alone through dark he sat—
Platte.
Safe from the rumbling dust to the west
Cool in the western spruce that white . . ."

John Adams paused, unable to remember further, and to the surprise of every one, Matthew, dreamy eyes watch— the river, continued:

"While good Panchito browsed along the Beyond the picket line, it was an age
Of picket fires,
Browed beaver-tail was good
Better than dripping hump-bird, cedar wood.

Was sweet in flapping, snapping,
cracking high—
Alone in Bay, Bayou Salade, and Night."

There followed a moment of appreciative silence as Matt ceased speaking. Then Luke exclaimed with admiration: "Geek brother how'd you ever remember that?"—while Nancy, who had been with his head pressed against the wall, said that Matthew's self-consciousness had returned again, tactfully drew attention away from him by saying:

"Did any of those old, old Spanish expeditions come this way?"
"I couldn't say, my dear," responded Cousin Columbine. "They may possibly have passed near Pine Ridge, though that, I believe, has not been proved."

And no one dreamed that the girl who sat there, lost to the present in visions of other days, was to discover what looked astonishingly like the missing proof.

CHAPTER XXIII.

It was on the fourth of July when Jack announced at breakfast that with that departure only near Pine Ridge, the time had come to tackle the sagging gate posts.

"You can't put me off another hour," he insisted (when the old lady said: "Better those posts, Jack. Don't waste your strength on 'em"). "I'm two pounds heavier than before the blizzard, Cousin Columbine, thanks to these lazy days and Aurora's cooking; and those posts give me the heebie-jeebies. If there were time I'd paint the house for you too."

"You may have to take to look forward to when you come again," she responded, endeavoring to speak briskly. "I hope your father will connect John Adams of a job for the winter. Jack and I are going back to us. As for Nancy—I don't dare think how still the house will seem without her. I felt like a lost soul the days you stayed at the Farnsworths."

For the visit to "Uncle Tom's" was over—three weeks that had been the memory of those cruel, wind-swept plains, leaving instead a vision of flower-splashed prairie.

"If it weren't for this stack of newspapers and letters," Nancy confessed the day she stowed them in her trunk, "that ghastly experience would seem a dream."

"A nightmare," he'd call it," corrected Aurora. "Victor Tubbs says I lost ten pounds during the blizzard, and as for Miss Columbine, she'll never be the same woman again. It's my opinion that if Eve and John Adams hadn't took their lives in their hands and drove down here to keep her company, she'd have lost her mind."

"And it's my opinion," retorted Miss Columbine, who had come in unobserved, "that you were in a lot more danger, of losing yours! Don't talk nonsense, Aurora Tubbs."

Nancy laughed at the time, even though something told her that in a measure Aurora was right. One pays toll for hours like those, and Cousin Columbine had not escaped. The old lady was a shade less brisk, less energetic; and Nancy hated to think how lonely she would be when left with only Aurora Tubbs for company.

"If I were twin, or could be in two places at once," she confided to General Grant as she undressed one night, "it would solve the difficulty. What's the matter with a great general, anyway, if you're incapable of advising me, Ulysses S.?"

But if the General saw a solution of the problem, he kept it to himself, and the days passed with Cousin Columbine looking a bit grimmer when she thought no one noticed, and when Adam knew his appetite to the extent that alarmed his troubled mother. And now tickets and reservations were cleared.

Mary Taylor had promised (with Luke's assistance) to watch over the Aladdin Library; and Nancy was conscious of a new feeling, something she described to herself as "a sinking feeling" down inside, each time she caught a glimpse of the unasked question hovering mutely, hopelessly, in Matthew's expressive eyes.

Accidental Discovery

Explosive Discovered Valuable Because of Cheap Chemical Ingredients

Discovery of a new explosive of "high shattering power" in the remnants of a laboratory experiment which "went wrong" was announced by Professor A. T. Bawden, head of the College of the Pacific Chemistry Department at Stockton, Calif.

The explosive, Professor Bawden said, might prove of considerable commercial value because of its chemical ingredients. Last year, he said, a minor classroom explosion resulted from an experiment which had been performed successfully hundreds of times before. Looking conditions caused the blast, Professor Bawden and a group of students made the discovery.

British Eggs by Air Mail

Eggs Delivered From England Were Hatched in Australia

An experiment in sending British eggs by air mail to Australia, and hatched by Australian hens, has proved a great success, as two sturdy Rhode Island chicks hitherto unknown in Australia prove. Mr. P. P. Finney, assistant secretary of the Poultry Club of New South Wales, received two settings of Rhode Island Red eggs by air mail. They were despatched fifteen days earlier by Lord Grenville from his farm at Stanbridge, Essex, (Hampshire). The two chicks hatched out 23 days after receipt.

Poppy Day

The symbolism of the poppy the sorrowful appropriateness of its blood-red bloom, takes a deeper significance with each succeeding year. The Great War is passing almost into legend; a generation is bequeathed the duty of carrying into the years that have yet to come the work and the ideals of those whom the Poppy commemorates.

Canada has adopted the Poppy as a symbol because of the 60,000 graves in France and Belgium in which lie the dead of the preceding generation, because of the 170,000 Canadians to whom the conflict brought disablement of one kind or another. The crosses in the cemeteries of Flanders are garlanded with Poppies—dolorous emblems of a nation's youth consumed in the "Wrath-red forge of War."

On Poppy Day this Dominion pauses in its normal activities recall the sacrifices of its young men, to pay tribute to their heroism, their hardihood and the uncompromising fortitude with which they bore their privations and sufferings. At the same time, Canada strives to guide in some small measure an obligation to those disabled men employed in the Veterans Workshops of the country, whose only means of livelihood is the making of these simple emblems.

The wide ramifications of the great Canadian Legion, with its tens of thousands of workers on Poppy Day, take care of the distribution of these Poppies throughout Canada. There is thus assured to their disabled comrades in these Veterans Shops a loyal performance of a sorrowful yet praiseworthy task.

All Canadians of every age and degree should wear a symbol on Poppy Day. For that is surely a day of re-consecration and re-dedication to the work on hand of continuing the structure of civilization where the workers of a previous generation left off.

Our vanishing wilderness have for some time afflicted the owners of conservationists, but now science is bespeaking our assistance in behalf of some of the glaciers which bid fair to disappear within a few decades. If soaring summers succeeded by mild winters become the rule, Dr. Francois E. Matthes, of the United States Geological Survey, fears that within another 50 years Glacier National Park, Montana, may be minus its glaciers. Mount Rainier National Park, Washington, also has suffered from heat prostration. At no time within the memory of living persons has the recession of the ice rivers in these areas been so rapid as during the long-protracted heat wave of 1934. During normal winters snowfall and frigidity are wont to replace to a large degree the melting snows of summer.

Third annual competition for the most beautiful autumn-tinted Maple Leaf is announced by the Canadian Government, through the Canadian Travel Bureau at Ottawa in cooperation with the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways. The prize list for the 1935 competition provides for a total of $200, of which $100 goes to the person sending in the most beautiful leaf; a second prize of $40 and a third prize of $20. In addition a prize of $20 for the leaf with largest area, and for second largest $10 will be awarded.

Chief of Empire," the recently published work by John Murray Gibson, while really the story of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has so much of other Canadian history that it will find a permanent place as one of the outstanding contributions to the records of the Dominion. Starting with the first known arrival on our shores, a Chinaman, Hui Sien, in British Columbia at the end of the fifth century, Mr. Gibson traces the romantic growth of the Canadian Pacific, many centuries later, with a wealth of incident and detail, the author's long association with the railway having been of the utmost value.

Possessing one of the finest collections in the world of colored pictures of scenes in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, T. H. Lonsdale, of Banff, recently exhibited them to the Women's Canadian Club at an illustrated lecture at the Vancouver Hotel. The pictures included scenes of mountains, valleys, lakes and birds, animal and flower life.

Evangeline Booth, 69-year-old postmaster-in-chief of the Salvation Army, told the "Story of the Army" to the Men and Women's Canadian Club at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, recently. "I was born in the Salvation Army," she said, "but it has never become a common thing to say. It has always been a miracle." A capacity audience gave her an ovation.

Keen outdoor man, enthusiastic member and past president of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies and a leading stalwart in the ranks of the Trail Riders, J. M. Wardle, chief engineer, National Parks of Canada, has won well-deserved promotion to the post of deputy minister of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Premier Dymally, of New Brunswick, was the chief speaker recently when the City of Saint John played host at a dinner in the Admiral Beatty Hotel to New Brunswick's guides at their twenty-fifth annual convention. Heavy fall guiding attracted attendance, but a good membership under the chairmanship of William T. Griffin, of Beauséjour, president of the Association, enjoyed a successful gathering.

Draughts

A question that is frequently asked is—How am I to know that my room is properly ventilated? The simplest practical test is to step outside into the fresh air for a few minutes, and then return to the room. If the room is "stuffy," then it is not ventilated and the windows need to be opened.

Many people who quite agree that fresh air is desirable are afraid to ventilate their rooms because they fear a draught. There is only one kind of draught that is dangerous, and that is the one which strikes and chills one part of the body.

You do not suffer ill effects from a breeze out of doors, and you will not suffer from one indoors, excepting, as we said, when it strikes one part of the body and chills that part.

Cold draughts along the floor should be avoided. When the feet are chilled by a draught along the floor, and the head is warm, the resistance is lowered and a common cold frequently follows.

None of these undesirable draughts is necessary in the ventilation of a room. The window in winter is raised sufficiently to allow a movement of air in the room. Such a movement of air is hardly perceptible and is not at all chilling to the body.

Ventilation demands use of a little common sense in making the size of the opening of the window according to the temperature and direction of the wind.

Never fear draughts; just remember not to allow a breeze or current of air to chill one part of your body while the remainder is warm. Fresh air or cold air do not cause colds. Colds usually follow living in stuffy, overheated places, and the chilling of the body in one part, especially the feet when the rest is warm.

Keep the feet dry. Damp or wet shoes result in chilly feet, and chilled feet are disposed to colds.

Fond Mother: "What do you think baby will be when he grows up?"

Many Refinements in Ford V-8 Cars for 1936

FORD V-8 CARS for 1936 feature a completely new exterior treatment with new hood and fender styling, new grille and headlamps, new wheels and many detail refinements. Interiors are new with the style and color of instrument panel and mouldings to harmonize with upholstery, trim and appointments. Quiet helical gears are now used in all forward speeds and reverse. Steering effort is estimated to be reduced more than 25 per cent. ABOVE—The Tudor touring sedan, with commodious built-in trunk. Note the new wheels with 12½-inch hub caps and the longer body lines. INSET—The redesigned front end. Strandsling steps ahead. Fenders have a sweeping inward flare and horns are now carried behind grille in the fenders. Hood louvers are newly styled.
